KILLERS ON THE PROWL

By Charles L. Pollard

When I opened my Sportsman's newspaper, bold black letters sucked my eyes from their sockets with "Deer-Killing Dogs Bring Owner Trouble."

With quickening pulse I let my eyes travel further. "A collie and a beagle that ran a deer near a Cheboygan swamp brought the owner a fine and costs of $17.50. An order to kill one dog was given and Conservation Officer Norman Auldreich had to destroy the still living deer which had its hind quarters chewed savagely by the dogs."

Over the top of a hill, I then looked at the dogs. I have. It is a pretty sight.

While hunting rabbits near Grayling, Michigan, I heard a commotion coming from a thick stand of jack pine plantings. Going over to investigate, I parted the heavy limbs and saw a sight that was sheer horror to me: a dying deer.

Lying in the blood-soaked snow with her entrails hanging out, she tried to get up at the sound of my approaching footsteps. With a cry of pain that ejected blood mixed saliva from her mouth she fell to the snow again.

The whites showed in her wild protruding eyes as she looked about. Over and over her bleated cry rang in my ears as she tried again, and again to get up on unsteady hind legs that looked as if they had been through a meat grinder. Dogs had done this!

When I went home that evening, I left behind me an empty shell and brought back in its place a memory that will always burn in my mind.

Michigan is being over-run by dogs. In a stretch of highway three miles long between Roscommon and Grayling I saw at least 20 or 25 dogs running in packs of three and four. They were definitely hunting deer.

One dog in that bunch I recognized and knew it's owner. Turning my car around I drove two or three miles back and told him what I thought of a person who would let their dog run deer.

A family in the Grayling area own a dog named Blackie. It runs deer continuously. I have seen this dog and his owner told their son and dropped hints to the son's parents. Apparently it has done no good. Somebody went a little further than I did. They took it to the Grayling sportsman's club. It will be straightened out soon.

Take a look at Baldwin, and it's surrounding area. They can make the boast (which I am sure will not be very loud) that their house pets, and the wild dogs they allow to run free have hamstringed, and killed more than 200 deer.

What is wrong with these dog owners? Have they no respect for state laws, or laws of nature? If you were to walk through their woods, you would see deer lying dead like bodies in a battle field!

One of our neighbors highly esteemed in the field of sports commented, "It is just awful. The poor things are dying from pneumonia and starvation. Now the dogs are killing them too. Almost every day I see a drive to look over the deer herds. We must always see a deer or two that has been brought down by dogs, hamstringed, and killed. Something should be done about it."

One time Dad and I were taking some things to the dump. As we went down a large hill and approached the AuSable River, I looked towards a farmer's field.

Suddenly a deer ran out of the brush and into the field for all he was worth. As I watched him, six baying and howling dogs followed him from out of the brush.

As Dad brought the pick-up to a halt, the deer tried to span a four foot ditch, but failed to do so and landed in the two foot of water completely exhausted.

Getting out of the truck Dad and I ran over there and chased the deer killers away. As we picked the near dead deer up I could feel sharp bones sticking out where meat should have been. We carried him over to the truck and took him home.

For three days and nights we nursed the sick, starving, and dying deer. It was useless. It had pneumonia, and later it's neck became paralyzed. He might have lived if it had not been for those damn dogs!

There are many things we can do as an individual to help in this matter. If you know some one who owns a dog that runs deer tell him about it. Then if it does not bring results notify either Conservation Department or the Sheriff's office. Either branch will come out and straighten the matter out as soon as possible.

If you own a dog that runs deer, get rid of him. He is no good to you or the deer and will only bring you trouble in the long run.

The best rabbit dog I ever had ran deer and I had to give him away. He is better off in a deer-less area than he would be dead.

Michigan Conservation Officer Clarence Roberts states, "Your responsibility covers the action of your dog. Any dog pursuing, killing or following upon the track of a deer is hereby declared a public nuisance and may be killed at any time by any officer without criminal or civil liability."

One time I drove over to a person's home to see if he would care to do a little ice-fishing. Pulling into his driveway I saw that he was out back chopping fire-wood and his dog was not sunning itself on the front porch as usual.

Going up to him I asked, "Care to do a little ice fishing?" then added, "Where is your dog, your brother got him out rabbit hunting?" Wiping the sweat from his forehead with his sleeve he replied, "Now, he's out back running deer for his owner."

While that mutt of his was getting exercise, what was that poor deer getting? Hamstringed, and eaten alive. Needless to say I went fishing by myself and have never been back to that man's home again.

It is the many people like him that are the cause of this slaughter among our deer herds. They cannot blame this on the Conservation Department or nature. It is no one's fault but their own.

It is a rotten, and dirty shame. These beautiful deer, which are treasures and put here to be admired and for their food value, not to be molested by rendering, killing dogs!

Officer Roberts states, "Fines for allowing the dog to molest game birds and animals may run as high as $100 and $50 days in jail court costs. It is my sincere belief that anyone who would let their dog hamstring, and kill deer is the worst of game violators and should rot in hell."

HOME AGENT'S NOTES

"Consumers Marketing Information" Co-operating with County Extension Service

Do you make the most of the season of the year when you are buying and preserving foods? For example, right now we know that home-grown fruits and vegetables are coming to market. Do you know when some will hit their peak of production? Do you know the size that gives you the most for your money? Here are a couple of commodities — with a couple of clues.

The peak of the Michigan tomato market will be the last week in August to the first week in September. Sixty thousand to 70,000 packages a day will cross the Benton Harbor Fruit Market. So as August moves along, it'll be time to get the cans ready. Here's a little tomato arithmetic when buying tomatoes to can. A bushel contains about 53 pounds and yields 15 to 20 quarts canned. The 14-pound baskets are about 1/4 of a bushel or 5 to 6 quarts canned.

And an example from Michigan's protein products, now and for the coming month or two — the economy size may be the small size in eggs. The eggs hatched in the spring have reached laying age, and the first eggs they lay are small — so we have an abundance of small eggs. Small size eggs weigh about 1/4 less than large eggs. If the difference in price is as much or more than 15 cents — pound for pound — you will get more egg for your money if you buy the small size.

When small eggs are cheaper pound for pound, consider — they may just meet the small serving needs of your children, they're just fine for hard cooked or stuffed eggs — for salads and for casseroles.

Newspapers And TV . . .

Last year was a very bad year in the U. S. automobile industry. Sales were far under both past and anticipated levels. There was but one exception—American cars, with its Rambler car, whose sales zoomed an astonishing 80%.

So something reported by Editor & Publisher in a recent issue is of great interest.

The television people claim the world for their advertising medium. But American Motors, in setting its record, spent more than two-thirds of its $6 million advertising budget in newspapers, and absolutely nothing on TV.

The other makes all spent large parts of their ad budgets on TV.

Editor & Publisher says: "It will be argued, of course, at 1958 was an unusual year, that too many other factors enter into automobile sales, and that these figures are meaningless. We disagree.

"It seems to us that the coincidence—the manufacturer placing the largest percentage of his advertising appropriation in television and having the largest percentage drop in sales together with the fact that the only manufacturer who spent no money in TV but had the only increase in sales—is too great to ignore."

TV is a great medium but nothing can supplant the newspaper.

'Let Private Enterprise Do It' . . .

The American people can expect no slackening in the growth of the federal government's size and cost of operation, and, correspondingly, no relief from heavy and multitudinous taxes until they say no to useless government spending. The issue carries right down through state and local government. Iowa provides a current example at the state level where officials have requested that the Federal government build lines for the transmission of Missouri River power in their area. The Newton, Iowa, Daily News, has this to say: "The state does not need government aid. It can, and should where possible, be done by private enterprise. In this particular case it can be handled by Iowa's Power Pool—a combination of five electric power companies.

"For the federal government to do the job it would mean an outlay of $8,800,000. The private companies could supply the power at reasonable prices—saving the taxpayers of the nation $500,600 each year on the over-all project for fifty years, the expected life of the lines. That's a whopping $25,000,000 saving . . .

"There is another advantage to the program offered by the private companies. By being a part of the Iowa pool—which this would be—service will be assured of better continuity through looped two-way feeds as contrasted to the one-way feed from the radial Bureau of Reclamation (federal) lines proposed.

DUFFER'S LAMENT

"The private plan is cheaper and better—what more could we ask?

"Let private enterprise do it. Private enterprise pays taxes."

This is the kind of thinking that can curb government spending and stop government competition in purely commercial enterprise where it is not needed, and where it inherently has no right to be. It is up to the people to teach the politicians.

Sherry and Mrs. Frank Bennett enjoyed a visit Tuesday evening from Mr. and Mrs. Ed Clark, Miss Rhoda Riley and Milford Wolff, of Detroit.

From the Down Stream column, by Jack Redburn, pinch-hitting for H. B. Smith, III. It seems one day Roger Kneff was fishing on Lake Margrethe, and spotted a large doe swimming across the lake. Feeling disinclined to row, he conceived the idea of throwing a rope over her head for a tow. This worked swell until the doe neared shore and was able to get a foothold, whereupon she gave a wild leap and unsprung our budding pilot into the lake. As the canoe was still firmly attached to her neck, the startled doe bounded inland and disappeared in the vicinity of Bear Point. Roger gave chase, but was unable to locate either the doe or the canoe. The following summer Roger was again fishing, this time in Houghton Lake when he saw in the distance the canoe lost as described above the preceding year at Lake Margrethe. He gave chase, imagine his surprise, as he drew near and found not only his lost canoe, but the same doe still towing it . . . and in the canoe were two fawns.

Industry Growth Needs Complete Town Support

The success or failure of a community's industrial development program depends on the wholehearted cooperation of all its citizens. EVERY person in the community has a part to play. "Who, Me?" — you may ask. The answer is a resounding "Yes!" A careless remark about an industry and its management could make them feel they are not appreciated by the community. An unkind word about our town could hurt the confidence of those about establishing a plant here could cause him to decide to go elsewhere.

On the other hand, a few words of appreciation about local industry might help to influence a later decision to expand that industry locally, rather than establish a new plant in another city or state. An expression of pride in our town, to an incoming stranger might make him feel here is a good place to live and work. The stranger might be looking over our town as a possible location for his firm.

Yes, YOU are a vital link in your community's hopes to grow and prosper by getting new industry and encouraging present industry to expand.

The role played by each person in the community's industrial development program is the theme of an advertisement entitled "Who, Me?" which appears in the Avalanche today.

It is another in a series of industrial development advertisements sponsored by the Michigan Press Association and the Michigan Economic Development Department which appear in this and 315 other Michigan newspapers as a public service.

their plans for construction of an atomic-powered generating plant on a 600-acre tract in Hayes township, Charlevoix County.

It made a good show.

And the utility says it likes
what it sees in Michigan's future.

"We look forward to the future
with great confidence," said James H. Campbell, senior vice president of the utility. "We believe that Michigan will continue to be an industrial leader and that its population will continue to grow and prosper."

Campbell said the utility plans to build a 1,000-kilowatt generator to eliminate any known danger to the public, to our employees or to the equipment.

The utility thinks all of Michigan will ultimately benefit from the project, primarily because of the research that will be conducted.

"We believe that the construction of a boiling water reactor at Big Rock Point will be a sound means of meeting the growth of electric demand in that part of the state," Consumers President Dan E. Karn said. "It will also be an important step toward our goal of producing electric energy at reasonable cost by means of nuclear fuel."

The Northern Michigan plan will use a boiling water type of reactor.

In this type of reactor, heat produced through nuclear fission converts water into steam. The steam then spins the blades of a conventional turbine generator, producing electricity.

Consumers also participates in the Enrico Fermi atomic power plant project near Monroe, where Detroit Edison and other utility and industrial companies are working on a "fast breeder" reactor, which produces plutonium
as a byproduct.

Campbell was asked by the Public Service Commission if the utility would seek an electric rate as a result of the development of the Northern Michigan plant.

"No," he said. "We have nothing of the sort in mind. This nuclear project alone will not give rise to an electric rate case."

The Consumers project makes Michigan somewhat of a proving ground.

"What we are endeavoring to build an atomic plant of a comparatively known and tested design," said Consumers attorney Don T. McKone, "but with features aimed to further bring us along the road of the production of electric energy by nuclear fuels on a commercial basis."

The Michigan utility has gone through what McKone calls "almost a complete process of evolution from a hydro plant company
to a steam generation company."

McKone told the Public Service Commission "we may well be on the verge of a similar transition from coal-fueled plants to nuclear fueled plants."

THE MICHIGAN LEGISLA-TURE appeared this year to be on the verge of passing legislation to prepare for the atomic age. But two bills on atomic energy died in the Senate State Affairs Committee.

One, sponsored by Sen. Perry W.
Greene (R-Grand Rapids). Another sponsored by Sens. Elmer R.
Porter (R-Blissfield) and Lewis Christman (R-Ann Arbor), would establish a radiation standards safety board. It would prescribe rules and regulations on atomic energy activities and promote
"safety and progress."

Much more is expected to be heard about atomic energy in the future in Michigan.
